Description

Another gold-woven belt had a buckle, a tip, and two drop-shaped loops with images of a lion and a basilisk. The semicircular frame of the buckle is decorated with a pattern of S-shaped shoots. The pattern is made in the technique of notched enamel, that is, the recess for enamel are not made with soldered partitions, but formed by removing part of the metal. The enamels are now almost completely lost, but the small fragments of red and blue colors remain. The buckle bar is decorated with a braided pattern of floral motifs. Perhaps it was also decorated with enamels.
