Description

This is a schematized female statuette. It has slender proportions and stands on a solid leg. The figurine has a pronounced nose, chest, and buttocks. A double deep line marks the decoration on the neck. Probably, the incised line above the hips is the image of a belt or the beginning of a skirt. There is a womb in the form of an incised triangle under this line. The leg above the knees has a decoration of a belt of horizontal lines that descend at an angle in front.

Slender proportions and careful shapes of the buttocks and breasts correspond to the image of the goddess as a young girl. She is probably dressed in ritual clothing of a skirt and necklace. This image is among the most common among the Cucuteni–Trypillia tribes.
